MR. REDGRAVE TALKS.

An Interesting Conversation with an Old Timer About Early Days.

The Great Kootenay Country—Mining, Climate and Other Resources.

When our reporter ran against Sheriff Redgrave, of Donald, who is at present in the city, he found him in a very talkative humor, which we learn to be not phenomenal. After quite a talk of an hour or two, the following information was elicited:

Reporter—Mr. Redgrave, you have been in Kootenay district a long time?

Yes, I left Victoria 15th April, 1884, and went to Kootenay by way of Sand Point; from Sand Point to Wild Horse Creek, the old mining creek of Kootenay, and for many years a rich one, and then from Wild Horse Creek to what is called Golden. We crossed the Kootenay River in May; it was then a high stage of water and dangerous. We crossed on a raft made of rotten logs. After pushing off from shore I never saw the raft, it was under water, and how we got across is a miracle. Now there is a fine bridge and wagon road and all these difficulties of travel are over.

Reporter—What sort of a place was Golden when you arrived?

Sheriff—A few log huts and some tents in a bush by the side of the Kicking Horse River. We had to cross this stream also in a small canoe! Now there is a fine bridge over that. In the place also are two or three good hotels, two stores, a few farms around and a station of the C. P. R., where all goods destined for the upper Kootenay are landed, and there shipped on board a nice little steamer which runs up and down the Columbia River for nearly 100 miles.

Reporter—What do you think of the Illecillewaet mines?

Sheriff Redgrave—I have conversed with gentlemen from the States, some of experts, and was informed by them that there are wonderful and vast veins of mineral deposits, such as they had never seen before in mining regions they had visited in the States, and that they were very valuable, and would prove rich property to those interested when properly worked.

Reporter—What about the mine at Field which we understand is sold or bonded to a firm in London?

Sheriff—The mine near Field, called the Monarch, which is as you say bonded, has in it a wonderful deposit of ore. At present the face of the vein (I am informed) is about nine feet, nearly solid mineral. Yes, I am interested in an extension of that mine; have held mines in Australia, in Cariboo, Cassiar and Kootenay. I have not been very fortunate in mines; but Kootenay I believe will bring us out all right. There are many other places, such as the Otter Tail, Spillumcheen, Jubilee Mountain, McMurdo's Camp, Toby Creek, Finlay Creek, where rich deposits of veins have been discovered, and on Jubilee Mountain a considerable amount of work is being carried out. At Field the company is pushing work fast, putting in a side track for shipping ore, making shutes for getting the ore down, an incline of 7 to 1000 feet above the C. & N. track, but very near to the railway. They are fixing up so that they will be able to work right through the winter, and will be ready to ship ore to Vancouver just as soon as the Smelter is ready to receive it.

Reporter—Are there any placer mines in Kootenay?

Sheriff—Yes; but I do not think they are very extensive, and of those we have got I do not think there are five men who know how to work them; so also it may be said of Rock Creek. There are very many who a few years ago never saw a mine, consequently they work to a great disadvantage. This will shortly be changed; as soon as we get one or two mines in operation men who understand mining will come in—many seeking for employment and capitalists who will be open to purchase mines.

Reporter—How about farming and cattle raising?

Cattle raising in the Columbia Valley will be a profitable calling. The climate is mild in winter; very little snow falls there and it remains only a few weeks. Bunch grass feeds all the cattle through the winter. There is enough farming land for more than to supply local wants, and enough to supply the thousands who will certainly be engaged in mining operations, etc. The government are building a wagon road and making bridges, giving greater facilities for travel and prospecting, as well as conveying supplies—which supplies now are getting cheaper; yet, fish (salmon) is 18 cents per lb. at Donald, potatoes 3 cents, cabbage 10 cts. per lb., beef 15 to 18 cts., fruit from 20 to 30 cts. per lb.

Reporter—How is the climate of Kootenay?

Sheriff—Well, you know Kootenay is about as large as England, and as we have wonderful mountain ranges, the weather may be, say at Donald, (as we have had it) 100 in the shade, and at 300 miles distance it may be 70 degrees with rain; but on the whole it is a dry clear atmosphere, more like a southern climate, and some years very little rain. It is a wonderfully healthful country and no sickness to speak of; still the air is very light and some persons it may not suit.

Reporter—Is there any sawmills in your part of the district?

Sheriff—Yes there is one at Beaver creek, 12 miles from Donald; cutting capacity about 30,000 a day. The owner informs me he is packing the lumber instead of sending it away, which he is unable to do owing to excessive rates. Both Chinese and Italians are employed on the railway; one can hardly tell the difference, with the exception that the cabins and sleeping places of Italians are much more dirty and filthy than Chinese, and where I believe 20 Chinese would sleep 25 Italians would crawl in.

Reporter—You have been a long time in the government service?

Sheriff—Yes, about 36 years in Australia, Toronto, Cariboo, Cassiar, Victoria and Kootenay.

Reporter—I believe you were an officer of the police in Toronto.

Sheriff—Yes from '59 to 1862. Toronto was then what western people call a hard place—sixty thousand people and a criminal population of from 5000 to 6000 a year. We also had a notorious Brooks bush gang, which certainly never existed in Donald, although that place has been painted in vermilion red.

Reporter—You came overland from Toronto to Cariboo.

Sheriff—Yes, I came overland, but I assure you we found a tremendous lot of water besides land. I formed a company in Toronto to come overland; others from all parts of Canada joined us. Our last meeting place was at old Fort Garry, now the large city of Winnipeg. At that place we procured horses and cattle, with Red river carts, received most of our supplies from the H. B. C. Governor Dallas treated us well, and gave me letters to all the forts to enable us to get any supplies required. At Edmonton we exchanged our carts for pack saddles and buffalo bags to pack in; came by the way of Jasper House and Yellow Head Pass. Part of the company proceeded by way of the Thompson to Kamloops, and myself with others made rafts and came down the Fraser by Fort George, landing at Quesnelle mouth after a long journey of six months and two days. The Shubert family came with us. I believe the next day Mrs. Shubert's first son in British Columbia was born, she being the first white woman who crossed the then most northern pass. Nothing but pluck and determination kept her up on this heavy journey, and I am glad to know that both herself and family have done well and prospered. We landed, some of us, without a dollar and without a coat or shoe to our feet. Twenty of us took a contract for four miles of road, G. B. Wright being the contractor. Commencing at Bridge Creek we completed our contract in about twenty-four days, making quite a little sum of money which enabled us to come on our way rejoicing. My old friend Bowron, now the gold commissioner at Cariboo, was one of us, and many times kept us up in good spirits when we were tired and weary, and I am happy to say most of the overlanders have done well in this province, and in their prosperity forget the hard feeling once entertained against me for inducing them to take such a journey.

Reporter—Were you not engaged in the building of the overland telegraph?

Sheriff—Yes, I left the Government service at Cariboo in 1865, and joined the company under Major Pope of Massachusetts, and the late E. Conway, who was one of the engineers. That fall we wintered at the Buckley House (after building it) at the end of Tatla Lake. The next year the work was carried on by Frazer Lake and by the fall we reached Fort Stager, about 35 miles beyond the Skeena River. Nothing more was done as far as construction went, the Atlantic cable proving a success the work of the company ceased and the extended stock which was issued became worthless. A few days ago I was informed a line of telegraph would be laid that way to get to Alaska. If such should be the case they will have to find a better way from the Skeena than where the work finished as a mountain range was met, and had the work proceeded it was made certain it would never do to attempt to lay a wire over such a range. Now, I will say no more about those old times, but I wish to remark the wonderful change I see in Victoria after an absence of four and a half years. I miss many old faces, gone never to return, filled by a new generation; strangers from all parts of the world combine to make the city of Victoria what it must always be, the leading place, not disparaging in the least the wonderful growth and the great future of the city of Vancouver.

OUR WESTERN COAST.

Improvements to Navigation—Fisheries—Light Houses and Beacons.

Mr. W. Smith, deputy minister of marine, arrived Saturday evening on the Princess Louise, and will, in company with Captain Devereux, Captain Lewis, Mr. Gisborne, superintendent of telegraphs, proceed in the Sir James Douglas to inspect the western coast with a view to the establishment of light houses, beacons, harbors of refuge and signal stations along the shores of our western coast, and also to determine regarding the construction of a breakwater at San Juan harbor. The necessity of the foregoing has become imperative, owing to the fast increasing trade with China and Japan. In order to secure the shortest and most expeditious route to the orient, the shores of the western coast of this island of Vancouver, must be closely hugged so as to take advantage of the currents. With the establishment of a signal station and light house at Bonilla Point and the erection of beacons on various headlands; also in the future the establishment of lighthouses at Cape Escott, Cape Cook and Hesquiot, the navigation of the western coast would become comparatively safe. The deep sea fishing question of the western coast will also be looked into. Barclay Sound black cod and halibut are celebrated, while all the numerous small streams flowing into the western ocean are teeming with salmon, in some instances rivalling the Fraser river in this particular.

The building of a breakwater at San Juan harbor to defend it from the prevailing southwestern winds in winter, will make that magnificent harbor a perfect haven of rest for the tempest-tossed mariner. The western coast is well adapted for settlement, owing to the Japanese current the climate is more salubrious and with heavy dews and a more equitable rainfall, vegetation, consequently, is more luxurious, and the tallal which in other parts of the island of Vancouver is a mere diminutive shrub, on the western coast attains the extraordinary height of fourteen feet. The coast line is timbered for about sixteen miles inland with cedar and spruce only. The soil of the many valleys is of a deep sandy loam, capable of growing anything. They are generally flat, well watered and offer a wide field for immigration. As yet the settlements are sparse, and confined entirely to the Indians. The scenery of this coast is something magnificent, and is practically unnoticed by visits from tourists. At Estrio Basin especially, where one cliff rises perpendicular like a wall to the height of 4,500 feet. Navigation is dangerous in its present state, and on a chart shewn by Capt. Devereux, many were the shipwrecks noted. This will of course be obviated by the establishment of lighthouses, &c., and the almost total absence of fog, will when the lights are completed, open up a new field for tourists and lovers of nature.

The effect of the quick navigation to points in China and Japan will be greatly facilitated, and with a new and practicable field opened up for the incoming immigrant the Island of Vancouver will make strides almost beyond the wishes of the most sanguine of her well-wishers.

It were well in the interest of Victoria were these subjects more fully looked after by our representatives at Ottawa, and something leading to the wealth of the common weal may perhaps take the place of self-interest. Too often has schemes for the public good been laid aside to satisfy private ends. In this great question we require an Island patriotism.

THE PISTOL IN COURT.

Sharon Divorce Case—Miss Hill Shoots at Justice Field in a San Francisco Court.

Labor Day—Thousands of Mechanics and Laborers March Out on Parade.

San Francisco, Sept. 3—While Justice Field, of the Supreme Court, was tendering a decision adverse to Sarah Althea in the celebrated Sharon case, in the Circuit Court, this morning, the latter drew a pistol and fired at the Justice, but without effect. She is now under arrest.

Sarah Althea's husband, Judge Terry, drew a knife and attempted to stab one of the marshals. He was, after a stubborn resistance, deprived of the weapon and fought like a maniac. It took the combined efforts of all the marshals to handcuff him. His wife, still struggling and raving, got one hand free and before any one could stop her aimed her pistol and fired. No one was hurt, but one of the deputies had a narrow escape. Before she could aim again the weapon was wrenched from her and she was handcuffed.

The celebrated Sharon case came up in the Circuit Court this morning in its most sensational form. A decision, which was rendered by Justice Field of the U. S. supreme bench, was a revival of the old decision which prevented Sarah Althea (now Mrs. Terry), from claiming to be the wife of Wm. Sharon and declared fraudulent the marriage contract and ordered it cancelled. When it was apparent that Justice Field's decision was going against Sarah Althea, the latter arose in her seat and exclaimed, "Judge Field, how much have you been paid for that decision? You have been bought, you know it." The Justice ordered her removed from the court room, when she drew a pistol and would have fired at the Justice but for the timely interference of several deputy marshals, who dragged her off fighting like a tigress.

Deputy Marshal Dean, who took the knife away from Terry, had a narrow escape with his life. He nor any one else was expecting such an attack and before any one could interfere, Terry had drawn a long dirk, about eight inches and made a vicious thrust at the Deputy. Had his foot not slipped, or rather had he not been opportunely tripped up by Marshal Franks, Deputy Dean would now be resting on one of the slabs at the morgue or in a bed in the receiving hospital. The pistol used by Sarah was a British bulldog, six chambered, loaded in every chamber and evidently brought with the intention of using it if Justice Field's decision was adverse. As she faced the judge when she first made her speech there was murder in her eye. But in all her appearances in various courts, she never looked to so great advantage from a picturesque standpoint as she stood up and defied the judge. Her eyes flashed fire, wrinkles disappeared, her face flushed, blood red veins stood out on her forehead like cords, and as she hurled the words "How much were you paid for that decision?" she looked like an Amazon defying her enemies.

As soon, however, as the hand of the marshal was passed upon her, she collapsed. She lost all her dignity at once and became a mere virago. Judge Terry, as his wife first addressed the bench, did not move; but as Justice Field issued the order, "Marshal, arrest that woman," he arose and barred the way. His usually florid face was pallid, eyes sunk into his head and had the appearance of a man just awakening from a crushing blow. As the dust of battle, however, came over him, the blood leaped back to his face and a look of hate and passion that settled there made him look like a fiend incarnate. He was a desperate man, and nothing but his speedy disarment saved blood shed.

It provides that no Chinamen who shall hereafter depart from the U. S. shall return thereto after the passage of the bill; also that no certificates shall hereafter be issued to Chinese laborers, and all now in force shall be declared void. All parts of the act to which this is a supplement are repealed. The House passed the bill without division, and the Senate unanimously decided to take up the bill and is now considering it.

DISTRESSING TRAGEDY.

Cincinnati, Sept. 3—A most distressing tragedy was discovered last night at Delhi, a few miles from Cincinnati. It was discovered by Mr. Steenlee, of Delhi, that his wife and two children, who had been missing since Tuesday last, had been drowned, and his feeling is more intense because it is believed that the mother, in a fit of insanity, dragged the children into the river with her. The children were a girl and a boy nine and ten years old respectively. The bodies were recovered yesterday and identified.

SPORTING NOTES.

BASEBALL MATCH.

The third game of the series between the city's junior baseball clubs came off at Beacon Hill on Saturday afternoon, resulting in a victory for the Maple Leafs. The game was very exciting and the addition of Borthwick, White and Deasy greatly strengthened the Mayflowers, but they were unable to cope with their opponents.

The "Leafs" were well up to the mark, the play of Clyde at second being excellent. Askew of the "Flowers" at pitching and headwork won admiration, as also did the playing of Borthwick and White.

SCORE BY INNINGS.

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Maple Leafs	2	0	2	0	2	0	0	0	0	—6
Mayflowers	1	0	0	0	1	1	0	1	0	—4

Maple Leafs—Bases on balls, 1; passed balls, 2; wild pitches, 1; struck out by Pierce, 13. Mayflowers—Double play, Borthwick to Partridge; passed balls, 2; struck out by Askew, 13.

The Still Hunt.

Mr. Wm. Jensen, of the Occidental, who had been out along the line of the E. & N. Railway since Saturday morning returned yesterday with 23 grouse.

Messrs Losee and Lang were out to the summit on Saturday and returned with three fine deer. An incident occurred in connection with the trip that is worth relating. They came upon a fine buck and both fired at him when he started off on the run and entered a thicket. They followed him and were surprised after going a short distance to find the wounded deer in the hug of a big black bear. They promptly sent two or three volleys into brush, but their rifles were only 44 and 50 Winchesters and failing to hit the animal in a vital part they did not bring him down, and having no dogs they could not follow him. The buck was secured.

Messrs. Fred Partridge, E. J. Thain and others returned to town to-day with pretty well filled game bags. Mr. Geo. Maynard came in with seven grouse and pheasant. Jack Knight brought home a deer.

Steamboat Accident.

The steamer Rainbow, while making a landing at the outer wharf this afternoon, came against the pier with too great headway and snapped off the top of her stem. Quite a hole was punched into her, but she will probably be able to keep on running.

A SUGGESTION.

It is suggested that instead of a telegraph line being constructed between this city and Bonilla Point that a telephone service be established. The telephone would do away with delay in delivering messages and as every ship owner has an instrument both in his place of business and his residence, he could be informed at any time of the approach of vessels. Moreover, a trained hand would not be required at Bonilla Point, almost anyone being able to perform the duties required. From all points the telephone would appear to be the more convenient for this service.

THE NEWS QUESTION.

Judges in this province have taken it upon themselves before now to order the suppression of proceedings in open court. The newspapers have obeyed the order and surrendered the privilege of publishing the news without any equitable or legal reasons for doing so. THE TIMES has always disputed the power of judges or anyone else to make such an order. Beyond what is libelous, treasonable, blasphemous, obscene or tending to prejudice a case, the newspapers have a perfect right to publish anything which they consider of interest or importance to the community. If any discrimination is to be made the editors only, who take their instructions largely from the public, have a right to discriminate and no judge or anyone else who chooses to regard himself as a legally constituted censor of the press has a right to say what shall or shall not be published. The proceedings of open courts, parliaments, municipal councils and all other public bodies are privileged and any interference with the press in such cases is an encroachment upon public rights and the liberty of the subject. It is true no doubt that these privileges can be abused to some extent, but no newspaper of standing is intentionally guilty of that, or if they are they are amendable to the law like anyone else. The editors of the great New York dailies are exceedingly jealous of their rights. It having been proposed that all executions should be made by electricity and that it should be a misdemeanor to publish anything more than the bare official announcement of an execution having taken place, a reporter proceeded to find out what course the papers would take. CHESTER S. LORD of the Sun: "We have a habit of printing the news in this establishment, and it would take considerable imprisonment, to break us of it." JULIUS CHAMBERS of the Herald said: "We have sent as far as the Polar Sea for news, and at rather more danger than that of imprisonment, so I think you will find the electrical executions reported in our columns." JOHN REID of the Times said: "We are in the business of selling news to the public, and our wares will always include a complete assortment." JOHN A. COCKERILL of the World said: "There would be a strife in this office for the distinction of imprisonment for publishing the news." GEORGE F. FOSTER of the Star said: "That law is sure to be violated, whatever the consequence may be." ROBERT P. PORTER of the Press said: "It is a law to be broken." J. I. C. CLARK of the Morning Journal said: "America does not want a censorship of the press, and the press won't have it." It seems likely that there will be some interesting reading matter, of one kind and another, about the first electrical execution.

IS LORNE DISLOYAL?

The Marquis of LORNE has contributed an article on "Distrust of Popular Government" to the September Forum which has attracted considerable attention. He defends the system of government established in the United States, against an attack made upon it by one of his American correspondents, who alleges that the Republican form of government must always lack oneness of purpose, singleness of aim, and that "such a government is fated to be always weak in diplomacy." Says the Ottawa Free Press: The Marquis denies these accusations and even goes so far as to justify the tariff policy of the United States. He says that the United States has not become a naval power because the energies of the people have been devoted to the development of the country's internal resources. America will become a great naval power, Lord LORNE says "when she has filled full of men the great spaces between the two oceans. With the mass of exports to offer, and with an immense population demanding foreign goods, she will, in time draw to her more commerce than has ever been handled in the history of the world by any empire. The Marquis of LORNE argues that the American system of making treaties subject to ratification by the Senate, is a provision "tending greatly to the sanctity of any arrangement so made with a foreign power," and is therefore preferable to the English system of leaving the work of making treaties entirely to the executive. "It is the magnitude of her internal interests," he continues, "which has made America careless of foreign alliances. She cares not to lift her eyes beyond the splendid heritage she possesses." Why this laudation of the United States, the country which our ultra-loyalists are wont to characterize as "the Dominion's natural enemy" by an ex-Governor-General of Canada? Will our small-souled sham loyalists have the courage to deal with the Marquis of LORNE as they would deal with say, Sir Richard CARTWRIGHT, under similar circumstances? Why does Lord LORNE want to boom the United States and its system of government? Can he not devote his time to booming Canada? These are questions which naturally arise in the mind of the average loyalist for revenue; who is, however, precluded by constitutional flunkyism from finding fault with a member of the British nobility—particularly if such a personage be connected with the Royal Family. With respect to the pending fisheries dispute the Marquis of Lorne takes a very sensible view, and one which is likely to prevail. He says "it is safe to infer from the common sense which influences Canadians and their neighbors, that a matter which has so little relative importance to the Americans will not be allowed to mar the harmony which is essential between the British and themselves. To allow of a lasting disturbance of their relations from such a cause would be as ridiculous as if two prosperous farmers were to fall out for the sake of the use of a bit of sea-tangle for the fertilization of their acres." If this is not treason it is at least a pretty sweeping condemnation of the Dominion government's policy with respect to the fisheries question. The noble Marquis argues at length to prove that the American system of government provides greater safeguards against popular uprisings, and for the preservation of the state and society than the monarchical system. He says that few of the older republics, states or empires are found to enjoy more real stability than the system founded under WASHINGTON. "The American ship of state," Lord LORNE says, "is built in so many compartments that even if several became water-logged the ship would float."

THE MANITOBA CROP.

The Winnipeg Free Press of Wednesday last publishes carefully compiled reports from every quarter of the province, in respect to the condition of the harvest of this year, which is now being garnered. A short time ago there were vague rumors that this season's yield in the great wheat-producing province would be much lower than in 1887, but the accounts now published dispel all fears of a falling off. In all the districts, with one or two exceptions, wheat harvesting is general and the anticipated yield is placed at thirty bushels to the acre. On the whole the crop will be larger than last year's, and the province will have over ten million bushels for export. A country that can be depended upon to produce so largely in excess of the wants of its own people, as it appears Manitoba can be, must eventually enjoy a high state of prosperity if not of opulence.

RETALIATION.

The Chinese question is a great source of perpelexity to the British Government. The colonial discrimination against the Chinese has at last goaded the Government of China to make retaliation. It is reported that they have ordered that none of their subjects shall take any goods from China to any British territory for barter or trade between now and July, 1891, and that within a year from that date—1892—all their subjects domiciled in British colonies must return home or forfeit the protection of their Government. This applies not merely to Australia, but to British Columbia, where there are many Chinamen, and to points like Singapore, where they dwell in large numbers. The Chinese Government may go farther than this, and attempt to deprive British subjects of the privileges they now enjoy in China.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Mr. Stuart Tupper, of Winnipeg, is congratulating himself on the fact that the new title conferred upon his father is hereditary.

Gabriel Dumont leaves Montreal next month for Batoche. An effort has been made to induce him to marry a rich widow of that city but he declares he must give his life to his people and return to them.

At a Liberal caucus in Winnipeg the question of the Hudson's Bay Aid Act was considered. It is said it has finally decided to offer to guarantee $2,500,000 for 25 years at 4 per cent, instead of $4,500,000 as the act proposes.

The Army and Navy Gazette, which reflects accurately the feeling of the fighting men, says of the retaliatory message: "We are ready at any rate." It adds, "This furnishes a significant comment on the rubbish our press shoots out on occasions anent common language, origin and objects of the two great branches of the Anglo-Saxon race. The menace is direct and the power to execute, it seems, is not wanting, or the will either."

OUR TOWN MAJOR.

A Talk on Unity in the Cathedral—Sunday Shooting, &c.

There was no shooting on Government or Yates street Saturday evening, but there was plenty of shooting and booming of guns, keeping time with "the church going bell." When the bell ceased the booming kept on all the same. After divine service the guns ceased and went, it is supposed, to have a drink. This indiscriminate firing off of guns may suit the 5th of November, but not the Sabbath. No one is so very hungry here in Victoria that they are compelled to go hunt their Sunday's dinner, and it were well for the character of the city were it discontinued. We should begin to have little more civilized notions, now that we are to have a non-intercourse policy it will be a good time to learn to respect ourselves and our country. It were a good job for British Columbia if this non-intercourse law were put into effect and kept there; we would then learn to not only mend our morals, but also be compelled from force of circumstances, to devise means to raise our own food, keep our money in our own pockets instead of sending it off by the car load to keep up the farmers of the country over the way.

We had the usual Saturday night's fire—an empty house. It went to work slowly, and for a fire didn't seem able to get any steam on. The big boys with beard on their faces, who from sheer wantonness plucked the unripe pears from the trees, and began shying them at the smouldering heap, ought to feel proud of their daring exploits in this endeavor to put down the flames. Some fellow shouted "Oh, there's The Town Major," and the vandals thereon ceased. The flames were doing enough damage without voluntary aid from the mischievous.

We had great preaching and "braw" congregations in the churches yesterday; it was a sign everybody didn't go out shooting. In the Major's church (Christ Church Cathedral) the members of the male persuasion were on the increase, especially in the young branches. This is a good sign. The ladies, of course, were as usual out in force. In the morning the congregation was treated to comments on the proceedings of the Pan Anglican Synod, London. The preacher took for his text, 3 vers, 122 psalm, and opened the discourse by informing his attentive hearers that he intended reading, for their edification, the resolutions as passed by the Pan Anglican Synod in London. He said: Many fancied that the Bishops were having a good excursion in London, but such was not the case. The Right Rev. Fathers in God were working hard and earnestly in the cause of Christ and of the Church, and were endeavoring by their labors to bring about a better state of things in the church body, Christ's Kingdom militant on earth, as appears by the proceedings, of which the following is a synopsis: First, in the noble cause of temperance, which must not be taken in the total abstinence sense, and advocated means for the suppression of the evils of intemperance. Under this head came up the question of the substitution of unfermented wine for the fermented, at the celebration of the Lord's Supper. It was concluded not to go against the direct instruction of Our Lord's own words on this important matter. Secondly, was the question of purity—purity in the relation of sexes. We had impurity to contend against. It was blazoned about before our eyes, and we, as Christians, should do our best to suppress it. The Synod, or the preacher, offered no suggestion for its suppression. Under the head of purity we had the question of marriage and divorce. The great point raised was could a clergyman celebrate the marriage ceremony for the innocent party in cases of divorce? If legal in the eye of the law then the Church should countenance it, and decided, in regard to the guilty party, to refuse them the rites of matrimony, so long as the innocent one, from whom divorced, was living. Polygamy also came under the head of purity. The question was could the polygamist be received into the bosom of the Church without forsaking their wives? No. Could they keep their first wife? Yes, and they would be required to serve a term of probation before being finally received into the Church. Although women could be admitted at once according to the opinion of the pastor as to fitness. The third question was Sabbath observance. Here masters and employers of labor were recommended to jealously guard their servants' privileges regarding the day of rest. The fourth was on the sociability of clergymen with the members of their flock. Some members of a congregation may be rich and others poor. We were recommended to bear with one another and mix more with each other in Christian unity. Under this head came up also the question of emigration, which was strongly advocated. Care should be taken that immigrants on arriving in a colony should be received with kindness and encouragement by the members of the church, and treated in a brotherly manner on the union of the churches. The Bishops said all should join together in the work of their Master, and one body should not close their eyes to the good done by another body of Christ's church on earth, and expressed a sympathy with their views to further the cause of Christ, and hoped that other Christian bodies would sympathize with them. The Old and New Testament taught the doctrine of unity; so did the historical Episcopal church. Christian intercourse should be encouraged with the Scandinavians in our midst, and with the old Catholics. We should help each other. The ancient Eastern Church preserved the light burning through ages of darkness. The Roman Church wronged her Eastern sister in not giving her credit or help for her good work in the cause of Christ, and used every means to suppress her without avail. The clergy should have more help from the people, especially regarding education. Apologizing for the length of the sermon, the reverend gentleman wound up his interesting discourse by saying that the key note throughout the proceedings of the Synod was Unity! Like as the Psalmist said.

Some fellow, writing from Victoria, has been endeavoring to cram down the readers of the Oregonian with a lot of unfounded trash regarding Victoria. Now, we may be bad enough and have our faults, which are constantly pointed out by the Major, who reserves to himself the right of doing so. Strangers must not interfere with our little peculiarities, if some with an grace from them, and must be attributed to jealously. As for our institutions they are British, and as such are beyond compare, even with those of the vaunted land of liberty. THE TOWN MAJOR.

The proceedings of the Orange Supreme Grand Lodge closed at Winnipeg on Thursday last in a trip down the river. The visitors made speeches referring to the hospitality tendered them and the greatness of the country. During the meeting a committee was appointed to check the extension of the Jesuit order in Canada. Clarke Wallace was reappointed Grand Master.

I was a great sufferer from Dyspepsia and Constipation. I had no appetite, and was constantly afflicted with Headache and Dizziness. I consulted our family doctor, who prescribed for me, at various times, without affording more than temporary relief. I finally commenced taking Ayer's Pills. In a short time my digestion and appetite my bowels were regulated, and, by the time I finished two boxes of these Pills my tendency to headaches had disappeared, and I became strong and well.—Darius M. Logan, Wilmington, Del.

I was troubled, for over a year, with Loss of Appetite, and General Debility. I commenced taking Ayer's Pills, and, before finishing half a box of this medicine, my appetite and strength were restored.—C. O. Clark, Danbury, Conn.

Ayer's Pills are the best medicine known to me for regulating the bowels, and for all diseases caused by a disordered Stomach and Liver. I suffered for over three years with Headache, Indigestion, and Constipation. I had no appetite, and was weak and nervous most of the time.

BY USING

three boxes of Ayer's Pills, and at the same time dieting myself, I was completely cured. My digestive organs are now in good order, and I am in perfect health.—F. Lockwood, Topeka, Kans.

Ayer's Pills have benefited me wonderfully. For months I suffered from Indigestion and Headache, was restless at night, and had a bad taste in my mouth every morning. After taking one box of Ayer's Pills, all these troubles disappeared, my food digested well, and my sleep was refreshing.—Henry C. Hemmenway, Rockport, Mass.

I was cured of the Piles by the use of Ayer's Pills. They not only relieved me of that painful disorder, but give me increased vigor, and restored my health.—John Lazarus, St. John, N. B. tf

A TALE OF THREE LIONS.

BY H. RIDER HAGGARD.

Most of you will have heard of Allan Quatermain, who was one of the party that discovered King Solomon's mines some little time ago, and who afterward came to live in England near his friend, Sir Henry Curtis. He has gone back to the wilderness now, as these old hunters almost invariably do, on one pretext or another. They cannot endure civilization for very long, its noise and racket and the omnipresence of broadclothed humanity proving more trying to their nerves than the dangers of the desert. I think that they feel lonely here, for it is a fact that is too little understood, though it has often been stated, that there is no loneliness like the loneliness of crowds, especially to those who are unaccustomed to them.

"What is there in the world," old Quatermain would say, "so desolate as to stand in the streets of a great city and listen to the footsteps falling, falling, multitudinous as the rain, and watch the white line of faces as they hurry past, you know not whence, you know not whither. They come and go, their eyes meet yours with a cold stare, for a moment their features are written on your mind, and then they are gone forever. You will never see them again, they will never see you again; they come up out of the unknown, and presently they once more vanish into the unknown, taking their secrets with them. Yes, that is loneliness pure and unalloyed; but to one who knows and loves it, the wilderness is not lonely, because the spirit of nature is ever there to keep the wanderer company. He finds companions in the winds—the sunny streams babble like nature's children at his feet; high above him, in the purple sunset, are domes and minarets and palaces such as no mortal man hath built, in and out of whose flaming doors the glorious angels of the sun seem to move continually. And there, too, is the wild game following its feeding grounds in great droves, with the springbok thrown out before for skirmishers, then rank upon rank of long faced bisbuck marching and wheeling like infantry, and last, the shining troops of quagga and the fierce eyed, shaggy vilder beeste to take the place of the Cossack host that hangs upon an army's flanks.

"Oh, no," he would say, "the wilderness is not lonely, for, my boy, remember that the further you get from man the nearer you grow to God," and, though this is a saying that might well be disputed, it is one I am sure that anybody will easily understand who has watched the sun rise and set on the limitless, deserted plains, and seen the thunder chariots of the clouds roll in majesty across the depths of unfathomable sky.

Well, at any rate he went back again, and now for many months I have heard nothing at all of him, and, to be frank, I greatly doubt if anybody will ever hear of him again (I fear that the wilderness that has for so many years been a mother to him will now also prove his grave and the grave of those who accompanied him, for the quest upon which he and they started is a wild one indeed.

But while he was in England for those years or so between his return from the successful discovery of the wise king's buried treasures and the death of his only son, I saw a great deal of old Allan Quatermain. I had known him years before in Africa, and after he came home, whenever I had nothing better to do, I used to run up to Yorkshire and stay with him, and in this way I at one time and another heard many of the incidents of his past life, and most curious some of them were.

No one can pass all those years following the rough existence of an elephant hunter without meeting with many strange adventures, and one way and another old Quatermain has certainly seen his share. Well, the story that I am going to tell you is one of the later of these adventures, though I forget the exact year which it happened. As my uncle Jim used to say, it was the only one of his trips upon which he took his son Harry (who is since dead) with him, and that Harry was then about 14. And now for the story, which I will repeat as nearly as I can in the words in which Hunter Quatermain told it to me one night in the old oak paneled vestibule of his house in Yorkshire. We were talking about gold mining.

"Gold mining!" he broke in. "Ah, yes; I once went gold mining at Pilgrim's Rest in the Transvaal, and it was before that that we had business about Jim-Jim and the lions. Do you know it? Well it is—or was—one of the queerest little places you ever saw. The town itself was pitched in a stony valley, with mountains all about it, and in the middle of such scenery as one does not often get the chance of seeing. Many and many is the time that I have thrown down my pick and shovel in disgust, clambered out of my claim and walked a couple of miles or so to the top of some hill. Then I would lie down in the grass and look out over the glorious stretch of country—the smiling valleys, the great mountains touched with gold—real gold of the sunset, and clothed in sweeping robes of bush, and stare into the depths of the perfect sky above; yes, and thank heaven I had got away from the cursing and the coarse jokes of the miners, and the voices of those Basutu Kafirs as they toiled in the sun, the memory of which is with me yet. Well, for some months I dug patiently at my claim till the very sight of a pick or of a washing trough became hateful to me. A hundred times a day I lamented my own folly in having invested £800, which was about all that I was worth at the time, in this gold mining. But, like other better people before me, I had been bitten by the gold bug, and now had to take the consequences. I had bought a claim out of which a man had made a fortune—£5,000 or £6,000 at least—as I thought, very cheap; that is, I had given him £300 down for it. It was all that I had made by a rough year's elephant hunting beyond the Zambesi, and I sighed deeply and prophetically when I saw my successful friend, who was a Yankee, sweep up the roll of Standard bank notes with the lordly air of the man who made his fortune and cram them into his breeches pockets. 'Well,' I said to him—the happy vendor—'it is a magnificent property, and I only hope that my luck will be as good as yours has been.' He smiled; to my excited nerves it seemed that he smiled ominously, as he answered me in a peculiar Yankee drawl: 'I guess, stranger, as I ain't the one to make a man quarrel with his food, more especial when there ain't no more going of the rounds; and as for that thore claim, well, she's been a good nigger to me; but between you and me, stranger, speaking man to man, now that there ain't any filthy lucer between us to obsculate the feathers of the truth, I guess she's about worked out!'

"I gasped; the fellow's effrontery took my breath out of me. Only five minutes before he had been swearing by all his gods—and they appeared to be numerous and mixed—that there were half a dozen fortunes left in the claim, and that he was only giving it up because he was downright weary of shoveling the gold out.

"'But,' I say, as soon as I could speak for my tormentor, 'perhaps there is some shine in the old girl yet; any way you are a downright good fellow, you are; therefore you will, I guess, have a real A1, old jam, plate glass opportunity of working on the feelings of Fortune. Any way it will bring the muscle up on your arm, for the stuff is uncommon stiff, and what is more, you will in the course of a year earn a sight more than £2,000 in value of experience.'

"And he went just in time, for in another minute I should have gone for him, and I saw his face no more.

"Well, I set to work on the old claim with my boy Harry and half a dozen Kafirs to help me, which, seeing that I had put nearly all my worldly wealth into it, was the least I could do. And we worked, my word we did work—early and late we went at it—but never a bit of gold did we see; no, not even a nugget large enough to make a roarl pin out of. The American gentleman had secured it all and left us the sweepings.

"For three months this went on, till at last I paid away all, or very near all, that was left of our little capital in wages and food for the Kafirs and ourselves. When I tell you that Boer meal was sometimes as high as £4 a bag, you will understand that it did not take long to run through our banking account.

"At last the crisis came. On Saturday night I had paid the men as usual, and bought a muid of mealie meal at 90s. for them to fill themselves with, and then I went with my boy Harry and sat on the edge of the great hole that we had dug in the hillside, and which we had in bitter mockery named Eldorado. There we sat in the moonlight with our feet hanging over the edge of the claim, and were melancholy enough for anything. Presently I pulled out my purse and emptied its contents into my hand. There was a half sovereign, two florins, nine pence in silver, no coppers—for copper generally does not circulate in South Africa, which is one of the things that make living so dear there—in all exactly fourteen and ninepence.

"'There, Harry my boy!' I said, 'that is the sum total of our worldly wealth; that hole has swallowed all the rest.'

"'By George,' said Master Harry, 'I say, father, you and I shall have to let ourselves out to work with the Kafirs and live on mealie pap,' and he sniggered at his unpleasant little joke.

"But I was in no mood for joking, for it is not a merry thing to dig like anything for months and be completely ruined in the process, especially if you happen to dislike digging, and consequently I resented Harry's lightheartedness.

"'Be quiet, boy!' I said, raising my hand as though to give him a cuff, with the result that the half sovereign slipped out of it and fell into the gulf below.

"'Oh, bother,' said I, 'it's gone.'

"'There, dad,' said Harry, 'that's what comes of letting your angry passions rise; now we are down to four and nine.'

"I made no answer to these words of wisdom, but scrambled down the deep sides of the claim, followed by Harry, to hunt for my little all. Well, we hunted and we hunted, but the moonlight is an uncertain thing to look for half sovereigns by, and there was some loose soil about it, for the Kafirs had knocked off working at the very spot a couple of hours before. I took a pick and raked away the clods of earth with it, in the hope of finding the coin, but all in vain. At last, in sheer annoyance, I struck the sharp pickax down into the soil, which was of a very hard nature. To my astonishment it sunk in right up to the heft.

"'Why, Harry,' I said, 'this ground must have been disturbed!'

"'I don't think so, father,' he answered, 'but we will soon see,' and he began to shovel out the soil with his hands. 'Oh!' he said presently, 'it's only some old stones; the pick has gone down between them. Look!' And he began to pull at one of the stones.

"'I say, dad,' he said presently, almost in a whisper, 'it's precious heavy; feel it;' and he rose and gave me a round, brownish lump about the size of a very large apple, which he was holding in both his hands. I took it curiously and held it up to the light. It was very heavy. The moonlight fell upon its rough and filth encrusted surface, and as I looked curious little thrills of excitement began to pass through me. But I could not be sure.

"'Give me your knife, Harry,' I said.

"He did so; and resting the brown stone on my knee I scratched at its surface. Great heavens, it was—

An Explanation.

What is this "nervous trouble" with which so many seem now to be afflicted? If you will remember a few years ago the word Malaria was comparatively unknown—to-day it is as common as any word in the English language, yet this word covers only the meaning of another word used by our forefathers in times past. So it is with nervous diseases, as they and Malaria are intended to cover what our grandfathers called Biliousness, and all are caused by troubles that arise from a diseased condition of the Liver which in performing its functions finding it cannot dispose of the bile through the ordinary channel is compelled to pass it off through the system, causing nervous troubles, Malaria, Bilious Fever, etc. You who are suffering can well appreciate a cure. We recommend Green's August Flower. Its cures are marvelous. *

Matrimonial.

An interesting marriage ceremony took place at the residence of the bride's parents, 154 Carlton street, yesterday afternoon, the contracting parties being Edwin R. Fraser, of New Westminster, B.C., and Marion, second daughter of W. McCracken. The bride was assisted by Miss Etta McCracken, and the groom by Mr. A. M. McDougall. The happy couple left for the east last night on a tour, before returning to British Columbia. The bride was the recipient of a large number of valuable presents.—Winnipeg Free Press, Aug. 30.

One Black Drop.

Byron was wise when he wrote, "a drop of ink may make a million think." This is indeed true when the black fluid is used to enlighten the world on the merits of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Let consumptives everywhere hear the glad tidings. Try it all, who breathe with pain and toss in fever through the long night hours. You will find the cough gone and sleep as balmy as a child's will visit your pillow. You will think the drop of ink that brought the message of mercy to you.

Port Angeles.

D. P. Quinn, who is in the real estate business in Port Angeles, came over on Saturday morning and reports business as very brisk. He says while the excursionists were over there a few days ago, he sold 25 lots to different parties, and was here for the purpose of giving deeds to the buyers. The mail service is now increased to three times a week. The people have petitioned the department at Washington for a daily mail service to connect with Victoria. Altogether he thinks the outlook for Port Angeles very promising. He went home this morning.

After a Lingering Illness.

Yesterday morning the grim destroyer death, claimed Miss Maria Winger, fourth daughter of Mr. John Winger, at the early age of 21 years and 11 months. The deceased young lady suffered more or less for the past two years, the last three months being confined to her bed, wasting and passing quietly away with consumption. She was universally loved and respected by a large circle of friends who will greatly miss her. Her sorrowing parents and friends have the sympathy of the community at large, in this, the sad hour of bereavement. The funeral of the deceased will leave the residence of Capt. Jaggers, View Street.

Henderson's Mill.

Mr. Wm. Wilson arrived from the mainland last night, having visited the mines in Nicola during his absence from the city. The new test mill erected by Henderson and company on the Star Mine had been successfully put in operation, and a few weeks will demonstrate whether the ore there can be profitably reduced for further working in San Francisco. The mill is expected to have a capacity of ten or twelve tons of rock per day, which will be reduced to one and a half tons. It is to be hoped that Mr. Henderson's venture will be as successful as he believes it will be; but it will be impossible to have returns for several weeks, and the real success of the enterprise can only be determined when the first bars of gold are run.

Saturday Night's Fire

About 10:30 o'clock Saturday evening the old house at the corner of Menzies and Simcoe street, James Bay, formerly occupied by Mr. Mudanna as a family residence, was discovered to be on fire. As soon as the alarm reached the central station, the brigade turned out with its usual promptitude and was soon at the scene of the conflagration. The water supply was barely sufficient to enable the hose to keep the flames in check. It being Saturday evening a number of people were abroad and the occasion of a fire excitement tended to dispel the monotony. The building was a veritable "old timer," as indicated by its log foundation. It was the first building in that part of the city, being situated in the centre of what was known for a long time as "Mudanna's grove." It was partly insured. How the fire originated is a mystery. Boys were seen playing round the building, which was unoccupied, during the day and it is said that tramps used to visit it but beyond these facts there is no theory advanced for the origin.

KAMLOOPS SCHOOL.

Characteristic Reply of "Honest" John to the Petitioners.

Some days ago we published the memorial forwarded to the Minister of Education by the people of Kamloops, protesting against the course pursued by the department in employing a teacher holding only a temporary certificate, while duly qualified teachers were vainly looking around for positions. We are now able to present the reply of the Minister, to which we will take an opportunity to refer in future issues. The Hon. John Robson wrote as follows:

VICTORIA, 20th Aug., 1888.

GENTLEMEN,—I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your petition complaining of the appointment of an (unqualified) person to teach in the public schools at Kamloops, and praying that inquiry be forthwith made into the matter, with a view to a remedy being supplied.

By reference to the Public School Act, 1885, it will be found, section 10, that it is the duty of the Superintendent of Education, inter alia, to grant temporary certificates of qualification, countersigned by the Provincial Secretary, and in sec. 31, sub-sec. 1, it is provided that a candidate for a temporary certificate must give satisfactory information as to his character and scholastic qualifications, and must forward an application from a board of school trustees desiring his services as a teacher.

I am informed by the Superintendent of Education that, in the case now under consideration, the requirements of the law were fully complied with and consequently the board of trustees were quite within their rights in making the appointment. Under these circumstances it is difficult to see how the board of trustees can be interfered with.

As the Superintendent of Education expects to be at Kamloops very soon, I shall however, request him to make such inquiry into the matter as may be consistent with his powers and duties.

While agreeing with you as to the importance of the Kamloops school and the desirableness of securing the best available teachers for it, I may be permitted to point out that the assumption that the holder of a temporary certificate must necessarily be possessed of inferior qualifications, is not justified. As a matter of fact, it has happened and that some of the best qualified and most successful teachers in the province (even including principals of high schools) have taught under the authority of temporary certificates which within the scope of their tenure, are presumed to constitute as good a title and indicate as high a qualification to teach in the province, as any other certificate.

As regards the alleged unfairness to teachers who had passed an examination and obtained certificates in the ordinary way, I do not hesitate to say that there is apparent force in the contention; but it should be borne in mind that it is the duty of the department to administer the law as it stands, and that seems to be what was done in this instance.

There is very little doubt that whenever the conditions, which render necessary provision for the issue of term certificates, shall have passed away, legislation modifying or removing that provision will take place, but it may be stated in this connection that, as I am advised by the Superintendent of Education, the supply of male teachers, and experienced female teachers is already exhausted, at least so far as is at present known to the department.

I am, your obedient servant,

[Signed] JOHN ROBSON, Pro. Sec.

POLICE COURT.

(Before City Police Magistrate Richards, Q. C.)

Two Indian men and two Indian women drunks were fined the usual fee of $3. Three paid the fines, and one remained to work it out.

Chee Quong, a celestial, charged with vagrancy. The prisoner had been up before at various times for stealing and for which he underwent several terms of imprisonment, notwithstanding Chee Quong exhibited a luxuriant pig tail. Quong was not up before for vagrancy and Sergt. Shephard informed the court that he was getting too cute for the police. His Worship sent the wily celestial up for two months.

Ah Chow, on remand for assault with intent. The prosecutor instructed Mr. Walls not to proceed any further in the matter. His Worship very properly objected to this compounding felonies and insisted on going on with the case, and read the law on the subject for general edification, and would not permit a felony to be endorsed, ordered the prosecutor to be subpoenaed and said the Crown would take the case up. Remanded till Friday.

James Welsh, charged, on remand, with bringing stolen property into Canada. Sergt. Shephard said he had received telegrams from Seattle stating that the evidence of Mrs. Babutge, the owner of the jewelry, could not possibly be over here before Wednesday. Remanded.

Mr. Chong Gee, on remand, on a charge of assaulting and obstructing the police. Mr. Walls, for the defense, stated that the constable being in plain clothes, could not enter a reputed gambling house without a warrant; quoted chapter and verse. His Worship asked couldn't an officer enter a house where the supposition was that a felony was committed? in which Mr. Walls concurred, and informed the court that there was nothing so sacred in the eyes of an Englishman as his castle—John, being a countryman, claimed all the rights of a true born Briton. There was no charge of gambling. His Worship said it was presumed that a game was going on; His Worship had not time to look into the authorities. Mr. Walls submitted some points; first, the officer was not in uniform; second, officer did not show his badge; third, no gambling going on; fourth, no evidence of the house being a gambling den. Remanded for a week to enable His Worship to read up the law. Mr. Walls said there were many white houses where whist was played for guinea points, in which His Worship agreed.

Mr. McLagan will return in a few days before taking up his permanent residence in Vancouver, when the terminal city will claim as a citizen one of its truest and staunchest supporters, both through evil and good report, a live newspaper man that will make things hum round the brick blocks and stumps.

THE CHURCHES.

Changes in the Pulpit—What Was Said.

Rev. D. Gamble preached in the Pandora street Presbyterian Church last evening to a full congregation many of the reverend gentlemans old friends embracing the opportunity of hearing his earnest eloquence on the morrow.

Several of the ministers in the city yesterday referred to what has appeared in the papers respecting Sunday excursions. Apart from the religious part of the question it was generally agreed that although they might be profitable to the owners of the steamboats or railways excursions were a hardship on the men who had to do the work.

Rev. Mr. Starr preached to a large congregation last evening. Taking for his theme the declaration of Pilate, "I have washed my hands of the blood of this innocent man, see ye to it," the reverend gentleman rose to one of his best efforts. He said the tendency of the times was to escape individual responsibility. Politicians refused to do justice to the wronged and oppressed for the sake of party; they might lose a few votes by it. Men in the name of business, in rings and corporations were often guilty of what they would blush to do as individuals. In the name of government and of business what crimes were committed! The sanitary condition of Chinatown was a disgrace to the city and Victoria should see to it that she elected men who would have sanitary and other laws enforced. Speaking of laws it was not creditable that private individuals should have to spend their time and money in seeing that the laws were enforced.

GATHERED FOR THE FLAMES.

Crop and Outbuildings of Mr. J. J. Russell Burned Up.

About 11:30 o'clock last night fire broke out in a barn on the farm of Mr. John J. Russell, situated at the head of Victoria Arm. The blaze quickly flamed into a conflagration and before many minutes had elapsed consumed two barns adjoining each other, stacks of wheat, oats and hay. The barns contained hay, peas, ploughs, harrows and other farming implements; also a fine stallion. Of the whole crop which had been housed, only a stack of hay was saved. The total loss amounts to between $4000 and $5000. The origin of the fire is unknown. Mr. Russell, or "Lord John," as he is popularly known, is a hard working man and well fixed, but could ill afford such a loss as this.

—D. W. Higgins, our would-be "Senator from Esquimalt," is on a starring tour through Eastern Canada and part of the United States, ostensibly in the interest of the Provincial Agricultural Association. The visit to Ottawa for the alleged purpose of securing the attendance of His Excellency the Governor-General at our approaching Provincial Fair, will, no doubt, be utilized by the wily D. W. in more ways than one. A visit to relatives in Brooklyn illustrates how two birds may be killed with one stone. The Agricultural Association will in all probability pay for the stone, with a little political capital thrown in, and the ulterior motive thrown open to light.
